

College Supplemental Essay

I am looking for career preparation in my undergraduate education. I come to college because I want to widen my view, explore my interest and learn thinking critically. More importantly, I want to learn economics and learn how to apply economics theories in the real world.

At this time, I want to learn economics well and I want to apply my economics knowledge after I graduate. So preparing for a career is more important to me during my undergraduate education.

After I have tried different courses from different fields in Fordham University, I find my interest of studying economics. I think economics is amazing because it can help people achieve their greatest satisfaction under limited resources. Government can improve people's life by international economics and CEO can increase company's profit by microeconomics theory. The benefits that economics bring to us allure me to study economics. I want to study economics well and I am very interested in apply my knowledge in the real world after I graduate.

Also, my internship in Bank of China confirms my thought that preparing for a career is more significant in my undergraduate education. I did my internship in Bank of China at my summer of 11th grade and summer of freshmen year. I am very interested in working in the Bank especially working as bank analyst. Working in the bank allows me to apply economics knowledge and I am very happy to help people achieve largest satisfaction. Working in the people requires people both have strong academy background and practical skills such as language and social because people need to analyze the market and company accurately and use simple language to explain and maintain good relationship with customers and colleague.

In order to prepare my career in the bank industry, I want to have rigorous economics education in college to have strong academic background. Also I want to find the chance in college to do research to learn economics practical application in the real world and do internship during the break to develop other practical skills.

I think in my current status, preparing for a career is more important in my undergraduate education because I like economics and I want to apply my economics knowledge in bank after I graduate.
