

Law Letter of Recommendation

Dear Sir or Madam:

I would like to recommend and support XXX as an excellent candidate for admission to your esteemed LL.M. program. I am a graduate of the New York University's LL.M. program. As a partner of Anderson Mori & Tomotsune and an external counsel, I have assisted with XXX for 5 years. Anderson Mori & Tomotsune is one of the largest law firms in Japan and is engaged in a full-service in a corporate transaction, including M&A, finance, capital markets, restructuring and/or insolvency, and litigation and/or arbitration. Since 2012, I have had opportunities to assist his matters, primarily concerning contract negotiations, purchasing equipment and a joint venture project.

I first met with XXX in February 2012 when he was a legal officer of Yotsuba Milk Products Co., Ltd., one of the largest milk producers in Japan established by dairy farmers ("Yotsuba"). Since then, I have greatly appreciated XXX ability to act as a cooperative member of in-house legal staffs. I have supported him as both a domestic legal officer and as an international legal officer. Within both of these fields, he has proven to be a logical person who exhibits a practical and mature attitude.

I was strongly impressed by XXX when he handled a joint venture project in Taiwan of Yotsuba. This was the first time for Yotsuba to expand its business overseas. Mr. Ikeda was solely in charge of the whole management affairs including not only registration of incorporation, relative contracts, but also operations of the company. At first, he set up a working team which consisted of us and Taiwan lawyers. Within this team, we talked concerning many kind of matters to understand the difference between Taiwan laws and Japanese laws, and discussed about explanations for the management of Yotsuba and what contracts and the company should be. I was greatly struck with XXX legal senses because he appropriately and unerringly pointed out to and questioned comments from us and Taiwan lawyers, even though he had never handled such international matters until then. As a result, he successfully executed relative contracts and established the company ahead of schedule.

Afterward XXX transferred to INOAC Corporation, one of the largest polyurethane foam companies in Japan ("INOAC"), due to his legal skills. I was very surprised to hear that because I had worked with the legal department of INOAC. INOAC has approximately one-hundred affiliates and subsidiaries all over the world, and I have heard that he is in charge of large and complex matters among others. With regard to a matter, I have assisted internal investigations him of INOAC again. It was greatly pleased to seeing his exerting his ability as a right hand of a manager of the legal department.

XXX informed me that INOAC awarded him a scholarship for studying as LL.M. program. It was not surprising news for me since I am aware of his legal skills and of his numerous achievements at INOAC and Yotsuba. I am sure that he will excel in even the most demanding LL.M. program given him strong legal abilities.

Finally, I state without hesitation that XXX has the intellectual capacity required to successfully handle the course of study required in the LL.M. program offered by your school and gain immeasurably from the experience. In addition, his aspiring and enterprising spirit will inspire the academic environment of your school and in turn allow him to grow and develop as an in-house excellent legal professional from the education he will receive from your reputable and outstanding institution.

Yours very truly,
